PRACTICES / PROCESSES

Harming Girls

- DJJ validate Detention Risk Assessment Instrument (DRAI) to determine accuracy in assessing public safety and flight risk. Modifications made in 2019 should result in fewer youth detained and more community-based detention options.
- A gender responsive training protocol was integrated into the DJJ training curriculum in 2015.
- Gender specific requirements integrated into contracts, program monitoring and quality assurance standards to ensure programs are designed to meet the needs of girls. However, review and modification process based on best practices is unclear.
- × Provide access to legal counsel at the first point of entry into the juvenile justice system and during transfer hearings.
- × Develop a position in each circuit that targets girls who cycle in and out of the system.
- × Convene a legislative work group, and a statewide summit to review the needs of girls in the juvenile justice system, increase coordination, problem-solving and to promote a unified, consistent response to girls. Include DJJ, DCF, DOE, courts and legal systems, physical and mental health services, and private providers.

PROGRAMMING SERVICES

For Girls

- ✓ New programming initiatives funded (e.g. PACE Center for Girls, Girl Matters® Continuity of Care, Statewide Open Doors Outreach Network for Victims of trafficking, Girls Court, etc.)
- × Adequately fund community-based alternatives to detention and commitment programs.
- × Implement small (no more than 20 beds) gender-responsive, culturally competent residential facilities for girls who require residential placement.
- × Require community-based, gender-specific aftercare services for girls transitioning from DJJ programs (including mental health, substance abuse, family counseling, crisis intervention, education, vocational training, and independent/transitional living alternatives).
- × Place girls under the supervision of a female probation/conditional release case manager and, where justified, an all female caseload for officers
- × Provide specialized, small family style community-based programs for girls who are pregnant and/or parenting to maintain healthy contact between mother and child.
